Social housing

Training 4
Programme and information
Housing has become a defining social issue of our times that affects all people and communities. Rising housing prices, stagnating wages, demographic pressures and declining public investment in housing in many countries are increasingly challenging housing affordability.

Social housing is an important dimension of social welfare policy and affordable housing provision, representing more than 28 million dwellings and about 6% of the total housing stock in OECD and non-OECD EU countries.

However, there are significant differences across countries in the definition, size, scope, target population and type of provider of social housing. For instance, social rental housing makes up less than 10% of the total dwelling stock in most OECD and EU countries, but more than 20% of the total stock in Austria, Denmark and the Netherlands, where it represents a key “third sector” in the housing market.

The objective of this training is to provide insights into different case studies across Europe. Speakers will illustrate the specific context of their activities as well as objectives, implementation or financing strategies. These case studies are meant to serve as a starting point for discussion and exchange of best practices amongst participants.
